

Imagination express

Where to start: Start with a conversation about an imaginary trip they would like to take. Is there someone who lives far away that they would like to visit? Some trips by train take so long that people sleep on the train overnight in compartments called sleeper cars. Does that sound like fun?

Prompt: You're about to take a train ride. Where are you going? What will you pack?

How to go deeper: What kind of scenery are you likely to see where you're going? A forest? Mountains? City buildings? Draw a picture of what you see out of the train window. (Use the back of this page to draw.)
